A half year market review

Welcome

Anderson Anderson & Brown Corporate Finance (AABcf) is delighted to share with you our Deals+ update for H2 2021, highlighting selected M&A and fundraising transactions in Scotland across key sectors, including; Technology, Construction & Property, Energy, Food & Drink and Business Services.

Reflecting on H2 2021

2021 can only be described as a bumper year for M&A activity. After a somewhat lull in the market during 2020, the market was due for a rebound in terms of activity levels and 2021 certainly provided this. The appetite for investment from Private Equity firms has been noticeable throughout the year as investor confidence returned, and we saw these levels soar past those of a pre-pandemic world. M&A activity levels remained healthy as companies looked to generate value and opportunities within the post pandemic growth sectors.

The Technology and Business Services sectors have been big winners throughout 2021, experiencing high levels of M&A activity as strategic acquirers show an appetite for consolidation and acquisitive growth as well as the active deployment of funds from Private Equity & Venture Capital firms. There were a number of key deals throughout Q3 and Q4 of 2021 that have been driving forces behind the market rally. We saw agritech start-up Intelligent Growth Solutions complete its £42.2m Series B funding round in November, as it looks to take the next step in global growth. Furthermore, we saw Aberdeen based subsea equipment rental company Ashtead Technology list on London's AIM market as they continue to grow their core business in subsea technology rentals and push to capitalise on the expected growth in the offshore wind market.

Our own Corporate Finance team have had a stellar 2021, successfully completing more than 50 transactions, with a combined deal value in excess of £750m. To name a few, AAB client, James Donaldson & Sons, completed the transformational acquisition of Stewart Milne Timber Systems, creating a group of companies with over £400m of turnover. Moreover, our team advised on the sale of driving licence and vehicle document check company Drivercheck to license checking and compliance company Ebbon-Dacs along with BGF's investment into innovative energy tech firm Isol8.

As we head into the start of 2022 we expect deal activity to remain high as the market continues to rebound after the economic downturn of 2020. We are excited about what 2022 brings and already have a strong pipeline of deals to drive forward into Q1 2022 and beyond. Our Corporate Finance team is here to assist in anyway possible, please do not hesitate to contact us if you would like to discuss any specific deal opportunities.

Technology Sector

As we conclude 2021, we reflect on another exceptional year for the Scottish technology sector. Although we have no doubt been through a challenging year in 2021, the same cannot be said about the tech sector within Scotland. The sector grew thanks to significant Private Equity & Venture Capital activity throughout the year as they were actively investing into the sector, Edinburgh alone closing out 47 venture capital rounds per statistics from Dealroom.

Scotland is solidifying itself as a leading Tech ecosystem within the UK, as we continue to see a conveyor belt of high quality technology businesses come out of Scotland. Established tech incubators such as Edinburgh's CodeBase and ONE CodeBase in Aberdeen have provided great support and a clear pathway for Scotland's entrepreneurs and tech scale-ups now have even more support available with the recent launch of HALO in Kilmarnock and STAC in Glasgow.

Significant M&A deals throughout the technology sector in H2 2021 included compensation software provider Curo in their disposal to Seattle based compensation data company Payscale. We also saw agritech startup Intelligent Growth Solutions complete its £42.2m Series B funding round in November, as it looks to take the next step in global growth.

Our very own Corporate Finance team have continued to build on their credentials in the tech sector, with the firm completing numerous deals in the buoyant tech arena during H2 2021, which included advising on the sale of Drivercheck to Ebbon-Dacs. Furthermore, we supported a number of fundraising exercises in the sector, which included the investment in Kick ICT from BGF and Puma's investment into Everpress.

We expect this trend to continue in 2022 as Scotland further builds its reputation as a leading force in the wider UK tech market supported by further investment into the country by both local and overseas investors.

Construction & Property Sector

The Construction and Property sector has seen a tumultuous 2021, with many large-scale projects given the go ahead, only to be hampered by significant supply chain issues, felt by almost every business across the sector.

The second half of 2021 had begun to show signs of improvement, however delays seen to construction work from Omicron resulted in a slow end to the year. There is general optimism that the supply chain difficulties have passed their peak, with government investment in major infrastructure projects as well as a rise in commercial property construction offsetting a slowdown of housebuilding.

Sustainability is also becoming an increasingly important aspect within the Construction sector, accelerated by the COP26 summit held in Glasgow.

M&A activity saw a flurry in Q4 of 2021, with a number of mid-market deals announced, with Edinburgh headquartered Miller Homes' acquisition by Apollo from Bridgepoint, expected to complete in Q1 of 2022. Timber is high up on the agenda as a sustainable construction material, and two large deals in the timber products space in Scotland were completed in Q4, with BSW Timber sold to Austrian producer of wood products Binderholz.

AAB client, James Donaldson & Sons, completed the transformational acquisition of Stewart Milne Timber Systems, creating a group of companies with over £400m of turnover. This represented the third transaction in two years for the Donaldson Group which AAB has advised on.

We expect continued M&A activity across the Construction and Property sector in 2022, as supply chain issues continue to ease. Many businesses that prioritise sustainability and ESG will be well placed to be attractive acquisition targets to acquirers.

Energy & Industrial Sector

The Energy sector underwent a much needed rebound during 2021. The oil price saw a steady rise throughout the year and at time of writing sits at $84 p.b, a stark contrast to the c.$16 p.b lows of 2020, an increase in demand and the supply cap placed by OPEC being major contributors to this.

The debate around the ageing North Sea Basin gained momentum as we saw Royal Dutch Shell's pull its support for the Cambo oil development deal. Shell were partners alongside Siccar Point, in the proposed sale of Cambo to private equity backed NEO. The decision by Shell will ripple through the sector, causing both companies and potential investors to think twice about putting their money into the North Sea and will increase the continued investment and activity within the green and renewable energy sector of Scotland.

M&A activity remained strong throughout the period. Emerging upstream company NEO energy completed the acquisition of JX Nippon Exploration and Production (U.K). Furthermore, we saw Aberdeen based subsea equipment rental company Ashtead Technology list on London's AIM market as they continue to grow their core business in subsea technology rentals and push to capitalise on the expected growth in the offshore wind market.

Our own corporate finance team advised on several deals within the energy sector as we saw investors with an appetite for the growing energy technology market. The AAB Group worked on a number of transactions for its clients in recent months, a stand out deal being Waldorf Energy's £330m acquisition of Cairn Energy's interests in the North Sea's Catcher and Kraken fields. Furthermore, we acted as tax advisors on STATS UK's £73m disposal to SRJ Technologies alongwith software company OPEX groups disposal to ERM Limited.

We expect continued M&A activity across the Energy sector in 2022, as we see an increased number of companies begin to reposition themselves to the renewable and green energy subsectors as they strive to meet their net-zero targets. With this we expect a strong year for deal activity in the sector throughout 2022.

Business Services Sector

At AAB, we have significant experience of supporting our industry partners across the various professions which lie within Business Services. Resourcing & Recruitment, Financial Services and Professional Services, amongst others, sit within this sector and opposite we have highlighted the H2 2021 deal activity.

It feels as though businesses in the sector have come out the worst of the pandemic, as well as adjusting to Brexit challenges and resolving the IR35 issues faced throughout 2021. Following initial uncertainty, this period initiated an exceptionally busy M&A market, through a combination of business owners and investors feeling it time to realise their investments, and strategic acquirers utilising the opportunity and available resources to consolidate and expand.

The high level of M&A activity has continued throughout H2 2021 as expected, with strategic acquirers showing an appetite for consolidation and acquisitive growth. This is demonstrated by customer management business CXP Group in their disposal to Huntwood Ctc, which AAB were delighted to support with.

In addition, we ourselves at AAB took on Private Equity investment from August Equity to support our future growth plans and the investment deal was quickly followed by the merger with Leeds based Sagars Accountants Ltd to build the regional presence of the group across the UK. The AAB group was further bolstered by the previous acquisitions of Edinburgh based Purpose (HR & Coaching) Ltd in July of 2021 and Glasgow based accountants Hardie Caldwell LLP in May 2021.

We look forward to seeing this M&A trend continue into 2022.

Food, Drink & Hospitality Sector

At the close of another challenging year for the food, drink and hospitality sector, it is encouraging to reflect on the M&A activity within the sector as it resiliently finds opportunity in the new “normal” that exists post Brexit and several national lockdowns.

As has been the case, the plant based food and beverage market remains particularly active across trade buyers and private equity as the UK’s purchase and consumption rates of plant based products continues to grow at a considerable pace. Notable deals include AG Barr’s recent acquisition of a 60% stake in plant-based milk and cereal producers, and the UK’s third largest oat milk brand, MOMA Foods. Full acquisition of MOMA is expected within three years.

In response to several national lockdowns, the food delivery market boomed. Despite the easing of restrictions throughout the second half of the year, the shift in consumer behaviour appears to be permanent, encouraged by the diversification of the market as traditional bars and restaurants continue to offer at-home dining experiences, and the expansion of online ordering platforms. Investment in the food delivery sector includes £1m funding secured by Secret Takeaways. The funding was received from a consortium of angel investors, and will be used to fund the geographical expansion of the business across the UK following its success in Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Although the sector continues to contend with the challenges caused by staff shortages and increasing costs, the strong deals activity within the sector indicates further recovery, and an optimistic outlook for 2022.
